- Administrative system for all aspects of your studies
- Course registration, grades, controlling your studies
- Some courses also use IS as an e-learning platform

ELF – E-learning at the Faculty of Arts

- <https://elf.phil.muni.cz/>
- E-learning portal of the Faculty of Arts
- Moodle-based
- Most courses in the English Department use it
- You should learn to use it as soon as possible

Department History

- The Department is one of the Faculty's founding departments (1921)
- The first professor was František Chudoba (1878-1941),
who was also Dean in 1927/8
- The Department remained quite small until the 1960s
- During the late 1960s there was a brief upsurge in the number of students (30 per year)

- During the 1970s and 80s the Department was again very small
- 10-15 students per year were admitted
- After 1990, the Department experienced rapid growth
- In the early 1990s, 45 to 60 students per year were admitted
- It was one of the first Departments at the Faculty to offer single-subject studies
- Today, around 150 students enter our Bachelor's degree program every year
- A further 110 students are admitted to study in one of our Master's degree programmes.

Professor Jan Firbas (1921-2000)

Cambridge University Press, 1992

- Most renowned scholar to have been a member of our Department
- Member of the Prague Linguistic Circle
- Syntactical analysis known as “functional sentence perspective.”

This is his key work

Recent Staff Publications

How are my studies in the English Department going to be different from secondary school?

- 1. Your studies are your responsibility
 - You must keep track of everything and make sure you do what you're supposed to do
- 2. You are expected to work independently
- 3. Your teachers are not your parents
 - We are all adults here and we expect that you will behave appropriately
- 4. Your success (or failure) is entirely up to you!
 - We are here to help you succeed.

- 5. Your success will not be only based on how many facts you can memorize but equally on how you synthesize and analyze the materials you read and the lectures and seminars you attend
- 6. You must read and study continuously throughout the semester
 - You should always bring your reading to class with you
 - “Cramming” for a few days before your exams will only guarantee your failure
- 7. If you do have questions, we are here to help you find an answer to them. Don’t hesitate to come and ask.
 - Remember that information you hear from your colleagues or “through the grapevine” may not be completely accurate or may even be wrong!

Cheating and plagiarizing

- What is cheating?
 - 1a: to practice fraud or trickery; b: to violate rules dishonestly <cheat at cards> <cheating on a test>. (Merriam-Webster definition)
- What is plagiarizing?
 - transitive verb: to steal and pass off (the ideas or words of another) as one's own; use (another's production) without crediting the source. (Merriam-Webster definition)
- Neither is tolerated in this Department, this Faculty or this University
- If you are caught cheating or plagiarizing, you will automatically fail the course in question. You will also be sent before the Faculty Disciplinary Commission with a recommendation that you be expelled from the University.

Grades and Credits

- The grading system is a bit more complicated than secondary school, with three variants, two of which we use here:
 - zápočet (credit): pass/fail (some courses)
 - kolokvium (colloquium): pass/fail (not used in this Department)
 - zkouška (exam): A-F (most courses)
- According to university regulations you must gain a minimum of 20 credits per semester to continue your studies
 - This applies separately to credits accumulated in each degree programme you may be studying
 - The normal semester workload is 30 credits

Your 1st year of studies

- All courses offered in our Department are taught in English
- Compulsory introductory courses in the 1st year for majors and single-subject students cover Practical English, Literature, Cultural Studies and Linguistics
 - These represents three of the four major subfields of study
 - The fourth, translation, is covered in Introduction to Translation and is offered in the 2nd and 3rd year of studies
- Language courses:
 - Practical English (two semesters, 2 hours per week)
 - English Grammar (two semesters, 2 hours per week)

Courses for the 1st and 2nd semesters

– Autumn semester:

- AJL01001 Practical English I (3 credits)
- AJL02001 Introduction to Linguistics (6 credits)
- AJL02003 English Grammar I (Lecture) (1 credit)
- AJL02004 English Grammar I (Seminar) (2 credits)

- AJL04003 Introduction to Literary Studies II (5 credits)
- AJL06002 Introduction to British Studies II (3 credits)
- AJL07002 Introduction to American Studies: Topics in Culture (3 credits)

Scheduling

- You may only take courses in the Department that begin with the code AJL0
- You may not take other courses in the Department as the courses you are currently doing are prerequisites for them
- Please deregister from any course in our department that do not begin with AJL0
- Register for both the seminar and seminar groups
- For example, AJL01001 Practical English plus seminar group 1

Be forewarned

- 1. This is not a language school
- 2. This year you will have on average 3 to 4 hours of language lessons per week
 - For some of you this is not enough
 - Study outside of class/university, self-study at home, attend a language school
 - Ask your practical language teacher for some strategies to use outside the classroom
- 3. You should think of every class in the English Department as an English lesson.
 - Listen to your teachers, the vocabulary they use and the way they speak.
- 4. After 1st year, language courses no longer focus on course books
 - Two compulsory one-semester courses
 - Academic Writing
 - Spoken Fluency

Completing your 1st year

- If you fail Practical English II, you will not be allowed to take any other courses in the Department until you resit the course and pass it.
- Most of you currently have English at the B2 level. The course you must pass is mid-way between B2 and C1.
- In order to complete your Bachelor's degree here, your written and spoken English must be at the C2 level.
- If you fail Introduction to Literature I & II, you will not be allowed to take any literature courses until you retake the course and pass it.
- If you fail Introduction to Linguistics, you will not be allowed to take any linguistics courses.
- If you fail either Introduction to American Studies or Introduction to British Studies, you will not be allowed to take any cultural studies courses.
